One organization has many members. I want to be able to update a single user's organization and all of the members of that organization will be updated automatically. My question is how can I access the currently updated (if any) data in my update action and use that to update the children, when the parent object is saved? A: You would need to update all the records that are related to this user. If your app uses strong_params, you could use update_all method. There is also some hacks that may work. I hope there is better way. First, in your controller: def update user = User.find(params[:id]) if user.update(params[:user]) # This is the user that we are interested in user.organizations.each do |org| org.update_attributes(user_params) end else flash[:error] = "User is not updated" redirect_to... end end And in your params file: def user_params params.require(:user).permit(:name, :organization_ids => []) end The present invention relates to a production method of a recombinant protein in which a gene is incorporated into a host cell by recombinant DNA technology and a cell transformed by the recombinant DNA, more specifically, relates to an improvement in a production method of a protein utilizing a gene, which is inserted into a gene in a lower eukaryote cell which has no endogenous gene, to be expressed in the host cell. As a production method of a recombinant protein in which a gene is incorporated into a host cell by recombinant DNA technology and a cell transformed by the recombinant DNA, there has been generally used a method which comprises inserting a recombinant DNA into a host cell and causing it to express a recombinant protein. As such a recombinant DNA, a DNA which is obtained by inserting a DNA
